POLITICAL PYROTECHNICS IN MISSISSIPPI -Col. Jeff. Davis has come very pear inflating Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, In renouncing bis recentation. Maine was the theater of bis renurciation, and the State House at Jnckson, Miss., takes the his recantation. In his speech defining his position, such hurning coals of vindictiveness fell from his longue, that, like his prototype martyr, he must have determined that "the member that hath sinced that member shall first suffer!" He commenced by explaining what he meant and whom he meant when denouncing "triffing politicians" who were constantly buzzing their disunion sentiments into the public car, and be expressed his astonishment that any States' Rights Democrat could have supposed for n moment that he meant to stigmatize that noble band of faithful Sontherners, of whom he wes proud to be one; men who had raised him to power and station, with whom he bad not ingloriously fallen and to the surging tides of fanalicism—and finally lonches the train of sky-rockety eloquence—like Iran of solid rock can he obtained for all the limit of solid rock and some of the dam; the foundations of solid rock can he obtained for all the locke and dam; the foundations of solid rock can he obtained for all the limit of solid rock. He denied that he had changed his ground from 1851-'2, or that he had ever advocated disunior, but seemed to scout the Idea that, in his late Northern peeches, he had landed the Union, and the blessings flowing from it. Davis and Douglas are tion, on Janus-faced platforms, but now flouglas, the hero of the Illinois victory, is distinctly charged with holding opinions as destructive to the rights of the South as those of Mr. Lincoln, his late opponent-in other words, the Democracy North, wherever successful, has been so on black Republican principles. This is the natural sequence to the reasoning of Col. Davis, and such direct antagonism makes his opinion of the future prospects of the country of great importance. He is reported to have expressed himself at Jackson as firmly con vinced of the lidslity of Mr. Buchanan to the conetitution, an I that the President would never recede one inch from his present stand, but, on the contrary, would, if neel required, take a step forward. He further said:

He further said:

That the clear indications were that the Black Republicane would have the majority in the next Courses and would thus control the legislation of the States; that in his opinion their policy would be to have each a multiplicity of candidates for the Presidency as to peeven a choice by the people, and thus they would scenre, by an election by the House, one of their own men. That if this chould be so, or if they should elect a President by a vote of the pencie, the question would he presented, what should the South do? For his part he had but one answer to sive, When that happened; when the government was in hostile hands; when the Presidency and the houses of legislation were controlled by the counties of the South, he was for immediate withdrawal from the Union.

Already, that arch-enemy of the South, William H. Seward, has prock-inned war upon the facture of dearry tizeff. In his recent speech at Rochester, he had declared that there was a direct and irreconcil ble antagonism between free and save labor. To the Chairman and Corporators of the Kentucky River Antigation Company.

Gentlemen: hyrequeat, the following statement in reference to the important Improvement, by locks and dame, for ateamboat navigation of Kentucky river, contemptated by your charter, with any all it may be to you in facilitating your efforts in consummating so desirable an object, is respect ully laid before you.

The sources of the Kentucky river rise in the Cumberiand mountains, in the southeast section of the State, thence its general course bisects the Stale running nearly northwest, entering the Ohio river at Caprollion, about milway between Louisville and Cincinnati.

The bed of this stream occupies a valley two to three hundred feet Lelow the uvel of the adjacent country; its immediate margin is skirted with rich aliavial low-lands or rottome, bounded by hill-side slopes and ve local limestone and sandatone bluffs; the adjoining up-innia smallel, and agricul neal wealth, or diversified with the finest varieties of tumber indicenous to the climate.

The channel of the river, from the forks to its confinence with the 1100, a dalance of two hundred and fifty-seven miles, is nearly the same width throughout its whole extent, sveraging about three hundred feet surface line at low water; when improved with locks and dame, the surface line of the pools at low water would be feur hundred feet wide.

The descent from the forks to the low water plane of the Ohio is two hundred and twelve feet, or about ten incluse to so and ripples, over a hed constituted of solid rock, gravel, and sand.
